Supplementary Figure 1: Number of pathogenic mutations plotted against the age of the patient when the sample was taken.

A) Neosquamous samples did not show a correlation with patient age and had multiple patients with more than one mutation.

B) Normal squamous samples had a weak correlation with age driven by the two samples from the oldest patient (86 years old). No other sample had greater than one mutation.